

Triplets after 2 ectopic pregnancies that left her with no fallopian tubes

Dillia

Dillia hails from Kasese, she's married and a nurse by profession.

Dillia's story begins when after 3 years of marriage she conceived and unfortunately the foetus went to the right fallopian tube which is known as an Ectopic Pregnancy.

As if that wasn't enough, she conceived again and the same thing happened. This time with her left fallopian tube. To her and her husband this was the end of having children, but being Christians they did not give up on praying.

Dillia intimates, "My tears were the order of the day. I cried until I could cry no more. However my husband comforted and encouraged me"

Despite her lack of children, she always loved them. She even looked after her brother's 1-year-old daughter whom she loved so much that other people thought it was her own child.

Years went by and although they'd vowed with the husband to keep the fallopian tube issue a secret, people started talking. She was so embarrassed wherever she could go and people started pointing fingers at her and even advised her husband to get another wife.

"One time I visited a friend of mine in Kasese town and as we were talking, she told me that she had started seeing a doctor in Kampala called Tamale-Ssali who was helping many couples. Knowing my situation, I believed it was impossible but she convinced me to try and have faith in God.

"I boarded the bus from Kasese after agreeing with my husband and came to Kampala. I explained to the Doctor and he told me it was possible to have children again."

The rest is history because Dillia has 4 months bouncing Triplets!!!
